McLeod expanding RV campground facilities

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Anticipating increased recreational vehicle tourist traffic from the 1984 World's Fair in New Orleans, the Hancock County Park Commission is adding 24 RV campsites at McLeod Water Park.

Hilda Bourg of Diamondhead, commission treasurer, reported recently that the $58,480 project will offer electrical and water connections with underground service lines, concrete picnic tables, grills, and individual trash bins to World's Fair tourists driving RVs.

The park is located just northwest of Stennis International Airport within the Joe Uithoven, Pearl River Basin Development District chief project officer in Jackson, said this week that his organization is funding the entire project except for engineering services provided by the county. Bourg also noted the County Board of Supervisors is clearing brush, providing fill, donating wooden poles for security lights and constructing gravel roadways for the crescent-shaped camp area.

When completed the RV facility will offer tourists "pull through" parking areas so as an added safety factor, the large vehicles will not be required to back into each spot, she reported.

Uithoven noted NASA several years ago donated the property to the district for a park.

The county operates and maintains the park, he added.

Marie Wall, park office manager, Monday said McLeod presently offers 12 standard campsites with electrical and water hookups, an RV sewage dumping station, some 100 primitive camping areas, about 20 picnic spots, a pavilion, a one-mile nature trail, two fishing piers, a boat launching ramp, and an electrically-lighted baseball field.

Apparent arson prompts firemen to urge caution

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Three trucks from the Waveland Fire Department and two from East Hancock Fire District responded to a structure fire alarm Wednesday morning.

When the fire trucks arrived on the scene they found a small fire in an old abandoned Sno-Ball shack on Hwy. 603 about one half-mile from US-90, said Bill Field, president of the East Hancock Volunteer Fire Department.

The fire was probably started by an arsonist, said Field.

"Arson has been a problem in this area for a number of years. It's the season when we have dry weather that a lot of fires are started," added Field.

He added, "We've got to get the people more involved and to notice what's going on."

"If there is any way the people can help the fire department it will save them money in the long run," Field continued. "Because in a high risk area insurance rates go up and it is also the taxpayers' money that is used to reforest."

Field continued, "We did have our share of woods arson."

Field said he wants to remind people to call the fire department about burning trash especially if they are not sure about weather conditions.

"There are some people who will burn trash with 60-mile winds blowing. The winds pick up the fire and carry it along possibly developing into a full-blown forest fire," Field added.

Field also noted that the forestry department can be contacted about weather conditions for burning.

He said, "If the forestry department says it's not a time to burn and people do they can and will be fined."

Field requested, "If anybody sees anything suspicious around summer homes that aren't occupied, please call the fire department or the police department."

He added, "We've got to get the people more involved and to notice what's going on."

In wake of Rappold firing

Mayor reveals changes in Waveland City Hall

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

In the wake of the Friday firing of Barbara Rappold, Waveland city secretary, Mayor John Longo this week revealed several changes in City Hall operations.

Those changes include the mayor keeping regular city hall office hours, appointing an acting city clerk and assuming more administrative responsibilities.

Longo said Wednesday that beginning next week he will be at his city hall office Tuesday through Friday from 9 a.m. until noon each day.

For the first time a Waveland mayor will maintain regular office hours, he revealed.

Longo encouraged Waveland citizens to stop in to visit or discuss problems with him during those hours.

The mayor also confirmed that Friday he appointed Arcelyn (Dee) Dastugue, the former assistant city secretary since 1978, as acting city clerk pending approval by the City

Board of Aldermen at its next meeting slated for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Longo said he plans to recommend the board hire Dastugue as city clerk on a "temporary basis" up until Jan. 1 and if she wishes to continue in the position, the aldermen may then employ her permanently in that job.

Rappold said Wednesday she will remain in her elected position on the board as Ward One alderman.

She refused Longo's offer to resign from the city secretary position.

When asked why Rappold's title was city secretary and the new position designation is city clerk, Longo explained state law forbids an elected city official from also holding the position of "city clerk."

He said Rappold's title of city secretary legally allowed her to seek election to the board.

Rappold has served as city secretary for about 10 years and alderman for some five years.

Longo stated, "What the city needs

now is a city clerk."

Regarding her appointment, Dastugue stated, "I will do my best for the city. I hope that is enough."

The appointed is married to Hillary Dastugue who is employed by Pool Offshore, Inc. of Harvey, La. in the Communications Department. They live at 132 Aiken Road and are the parents of three.

Dastugue said no decision has been made regarding a third Rappold position of Waveland Planning and Zoning Commission zoning official.

Rappold reported she does not know yet if she will continue to hold the zoning official post.

In reference to Longo's increased duties, the mayor explained he will be at city hall more frequently to help guide Dastugue in her new job responsibilities.

Regarding events surrounding Rappold's firing, she claims first finding out about Longo's action in the Sunday issue of The Sea Coast Echo.

But Longo said that on May 24 Rappold apparently telephoned Dastugue from Florida.

The acting clerk said she informed Rappold in that conversation of the appointment, Longo reported.

"She (Rappold) knew on the 24th that she better get in touch with her boss," he said.

In the newspaper report, Longo stated Rappold did not inform him of her decision to take a two-week vacation.

But Rappold said Longo was present at a May 18 board meeting where she mentioned plans to tour EPCOT Center at Disneyworld near Orlando, Fla. and telephoned the mayor Friday before leaving Waveland.

"He (Longo) told me (May 20) he wanted me to put everything on paper that I did every day and I told him I couldn't," she stated.

"Only twice in 10 years have I taken a Small-business Angle

by Wilson S. Johnson

There's little question about it—the favorite sport of most Mississippians is politics.

Year 'round—spring, summer, fall, and winter—politics seems the favorite topic of conversation from the forks of the creek, the crossroads, and even to the courthouse, the city hall, and the capitol.

And the fans become even more rabid in election year.

This is an appeal to all Mississippians: don't be satisfied as just a spectator in this great Mississippi sport; become an active participant.

This is general election year in Mississippi. Candidates are already announcing for office, campaign workers are being solicited, and sides are being drawn.

Now is the time to come out of the bleachers and into the arena. Now is the time to examine the issues, measure the candidates, become active in a campaign, whether local district or state level; now is the time even to decide whether to become a candidate.

There can be no broader basis for any government than that which includes all the people.

Now is the time for all Mississippians to become actively involved in their government through the election process.

Don't take old age sitting down!

Right now millions of Americans are being forced to sit back and rock their lives away. Simply because they're older. Stop and think about it!

It's going to happen to you. You're going to be "older" someday.

And you're going to have to face the same problems that exist today. Unless you start changing your attitudes about aging now. Get rid of your stereotypes.

Try and imagine what you'll be like. What you'll want to do. What you'll want to contribute. That's all we ask.

But you'd better hurry. If you don't want to take your old age sitting down, get off your rocker and separate the facts from the myths.

Get off your rocker.

AS THE YOUNG SEE IT—These four paintings were among the many shown at the Hancock County Art Association's show held on Saturday on the grounds of the Hancock County Library. Most of the paintings were done by senior citizen club

Hancock robbery fugitives captured

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Two fugitives wanted in Hancock County in connection with the recent armed robbery of the Necessaire Crossing Bait and Tackle Shop which occurred on May 11.

The two suspects were listed with the National Crime Information Center and had reportedly been on probation from prior Hancock County Circuit Court convictions.

Seay said, "James R. Butler is being held in Butte, Mont., and Raymond Allerman Jr. in Fort Collins, Colo."

week's vacation at one time," Rappold added.

Longo reiterated, "I say I was not aware of the fact she was going on vacation, if she said something at the meeting I didn't hear it. I've asked other aldermen about this and they said they didn't hear anything."

Rappold said, "Everybody in the city knew I was going to EPCOT. He's going to deny it and he says it's not true."

"He's (Longo) not going to stroke me out and I'm not going to have my family harassed by this," she angrily stated.

The mayor noted he asked Rappold for a "financial report and itinerary schedule."

"I understand she stomped out of the office," he added.

Rappold stated, "I told him I could not put on paper what I did every day because I don't know what I'll be doing day to day."

In reply to a statement by Longo that she did not work on Saturdays as other Waveland officials have, and had taken excessive time off, Rappold sobbed, "I just worked on Saturday a couple of weeks ago, I said I would cover for some people at city hall."

"I also go to functions for the mayor and originally resided in Waveland, with Butler being from Kiln.

A shotgun allegedly used in the armed robbery and a pickup truck allegedly used by the duo after the robbery were recovered by Hancock authorities, Seay said.

Some $150 cash, food stamps and checks were taken in the robbery of the tackle shop.

and represent the city at many events," she said.

"The Saturday thing was ridiculous. I felt I was working 24 hours a day and seven days a week. I thought the mayor and I had a good work relationship," Rappold said.

Longo also charged the former city secretary did not complete a $400,000 federal Community Development Block Grant application for sewerage improvements and Civic Center renovations by May 20 as he requested.

The former city secretary reiterated she telephoned Longo on that date before leaving on vacation.

Rappold stated, "That's the same grant application we've been working on for quite a while. I gave it to him at the meeting and told him to look it over—I let him look at it to see what he wanted to do with it."

"Maybe the city engineers called about it while I was gone," she added.

Longo said he heard through city hall employees that Rappold would not return from vacation until June 7.

Rappold noted she returned from vacation early (Saturday) because of a death in her family.

Longo said he feels Rappold will be a more effective alderman without the added pressures of the city secretary position.

"I cautioned her on numerous occasions that holding a dual role is time consuming or impossible even in a 55 to 60-hour work week," he stated.

"I have no hard feelings against Barbara. I think this is for the best..." he added.

Longo said his 21 years as a public official taught him that more than one city government position is too much responsibility for one person.

Rappold reported, "I try to give my all to the city. I've served on the Mississippi Municipalities Association and next month I was supposed to become president of the State City Clerk's Association, but I guess that's out."

"I'm so hurt, I never felt like this before and it shocked me to see this in the paper (the Sunday issue)," she stated.

"This hurt me deep and I don't want to see any more...in the paper, Rappold said.

"I will continue to serve as alderman because the people have elected me. And if they need me I'm listed in the telephone book and they can call me anytime," she added.

POINT OF LAW

Mississippi State Bar

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

Q: Can public schools force students to recite prayers?

A: No. Students have the right to follow any religion or none at all. A school cannot interfere with this right by establishing or conducting religious exercises or by implementing policies that favor one religion over another or religion over nonreligion.

This is based on a 1962 Supreme Court ruling that a public school, as part of state government, must follow the First Amendment to the Constitution which states in part, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

If the student or parents makes a reasonable request for an interpretation or explanation of the records, the school must provide it.

An orange tree may bear fruit for more than 100 years.

Q: Do students always enjoy freedom of expression and speech at school?

A: No. Students who want to practice freedom of speech and expression are prohibited from doing so if they will disrupt the normal operation of school.

Furthermore, school officials do not have to wait until their disruptive activity begins before taking action. They can stop students from carrying out a plan that sounds like it will be disruptive.

As long as students do not disrupt classwork or invade the rights of others, they have the right to express themselves orally or symbolically, however unpopular or critical of school or government policy they may be.

Five cent tax brings 20 cent hikes at Mississippi pumps

The American Automobile Association says a nine month trend of falling gasoline costs has been broken with refineries and retailers joining to raise prices during the summer peak driving period.

The result is an average per gallon jump of .75 cents in Louisiana and .93 cents in Mississippi. Thus, the increase in these two states is 2.5 cents to 4.3 cents above and above the .5 cents increase in gasoline taxes imposed by the federal government on April Fool's Day. The average increase across the nation was .88 cents, or .8 cents above the new tax.

These are the findings of AAA's latest Fuel Gauge Report, according to Bob Fry, AAA Central Gulf's director of Public Affairs.

"These price adjustments" notes Fry, "range from 20 cents a gallon or more in both Louisiana and Mississippi to one station in Louisiana whose price is one cent lower than before the new tax...and one in Mississippi that is charging 3 cents less than before. I talked to spokesmen from the retailers and the industry and they both agreed that there is an effort to increase profits every summer so this is not unique.

"Even so, had it not been for the new tax, we would still be better off than we were a year ago. The average per gallon price in Louisiana at $1.25 is only .1 cents over last year's cost. The comparable figures for Mississippi are $1.322 and .1 cents while they are $1.25 and .2 cents on the national level."

Fry also noted that 80 percent of all gasoline stations across the country plan to stay open over the Memorial Day weekend. That figure is slightly higher in Louisiana at 83 percent while in Mississippi 70 percent of the stations will be open for the holiday.

AAA again cautions consumers to shop around for the best prices at the pumps. Those prices range from highs of $1.599 for full service premium unleaded in both states to lows of $1.06 for self-service leaded in Louisiana and $1.149 a gallon in Mississippi.

While the last AAA report showed the average per gallon cost of gasoline in Louisiana was, for the first time, higher than the national average, the latest report puts this figure at one half cent below the national average. In Mississippi, the cost is .67 cents a gallon over the national figure.

A breakdown of the findings of the report are as follows:

Heitzmann announces for re-election

Jerry D. Heitzmann, 35, has announced his candidacy for re-election as Hancock County Circuit Court clerk in the Aug. 2 Democratic primary.

Even though Heitzmann recently won a Special Election this past December with 68 percent of the votes cast to fill the unexpired term of the former clerk who resigned, state law requires that he seek re-election in this summer's Primary and in the November General Election.

Heitzmann, a former district supervisor with the Mississippi Department of Corrections, said his eight years of administrative and court experience with that agency are excellent background to perform the many duties of Circuit clerk.

"During the past five months in office, I have brought many changes to the office of Circuit clerk. These changes include a streamlined filing system, staff fully trained to perform all duties of the clerk's office, and a modern accounting system. During the past few months I have personally collected over $33,000 in fines, restitution, and court costs that is in the process of being turned into the county treasury or being refunded to certain victims of crime," Heitzmann states.

"If re-elected to the office of Circuit clerk, one of my first priorities will be the continuation of records in the clerk's office. This will not only establish a more accurate system of record-keeping, but will ultimately result in financial savings to the county by allowing current staff to handle a much larger, and rapidly growing work-load," the candidate continued.

The Hancock County native is an honor graduate from both Pearl River Junior College and the University of Southern Mississippi where he earned a bachelor of science degree in criminal justice.

He and his wife, the former Debbie Weidman, have three children and reside at 702 Third Street in Bay St. Louis.

Heitzmann states that "A vote for me will be a vote for continued professionalism and good government."

Speaker notes patriotism is on upswing in America

By JUNE M. HEYDT
The principal speaker at Memorial Day services at Waveland Monday said the holiday as it is observed in the United States today originated in a Reconstruction-era legend.

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph C. Ramsey Jr., commander of the 338 Technical Training Group at Keesler Air Force Base, added, "We celebrate this day to honor those who made the ultimate sacrifice."

Ramsey spoke at ceremonies sponsored by the Waveland American Legion Post No. 77.

"During the time of the reconstruction in the south in Columbus on April 26, 1866 two women went to a graveyard to decorate the graves of the confederate dead," he stated.

"There were about 1,500 southerners buried there and about 47 northerners. The women went about scattering flowers on the graves and when they came to the Union dead they laid magnolia blossoms on their graves," the colonel continued.

People were so impressed with the fact that they decorated the graves of the northerners that the story spread, he noted.

Francis Finch, a poet of that period, heard the story and wrote a poem about it called, "The Blue and the Gray."

"In 1866 General John Logan issued an order to his men to decorate the graves of their comrades. After World War II a day was set aside to remember the soldiers who gave the supreme sacrifice, the day was called Decoration Day and has since evolved into Memorial Day," Ramsey explained.

Ramsey then spoke on the military today and said, "We are in better shape today than we have ever been. We are making recruiting goals easily."

"We are kicking out people who use drugs. We no longer accept that. We are kicking out people who are guilty of things or whose conduct is unsatisfactory."

Ramsey said that with the economy the way it is and jobs not being readily available a lot of people are trying to join the military. He continued and said that the military won't take just anyone. A person has to meet the requirements necessary to join the military today.

Ramsey said, "We feel in the military there has been a spiritual revival. A hunger to once again be proud of America."

Ramsey said he remembers what Napoleon said about the military, "It's success or failure depends on the spirit of the people."

Ramsey continued, "We saw the positive aspects in World War II and we also saw the negative aspects in Vietnam. We went through a period of wide disrespect and being embarrassed by an amateurish government."

Ramsey gave positive statements: "Something has happened. We had enough. We stopped apologizing for America and started rediscovering and finding how much there is to love about America."

Ramsey concluded by saying, "If the American people have the spirit nobody can defeat us."

Ramsey and his wife Amanda have a 13-year-old son. The colonel has been on active duty for 18 years and travelled extensively overseas.

Ramsey, born in Charlotte, N.C., has been selected for promotion to full colonel.

Also participating in the ceremony were the Bay High School Band who opened the services with the National Anthem and closed it with Taps.

Don Decker served as master of ceremonies and Father Charles J. Johnson led the opening prayer.

George Wilhelm, chaplain, said the closing prayer.

An omelet is one of the nicest luncheon or supper dishes on a sultry summer day, whether you've planned it ahead, or whether you're coping with unexpected last-minute arrivals at the table.

And, for a truly fine finale, slide the whole business into a hot oven for a minute, then pour a few teaspoons of brandy or rum over the top, and proudly bear it flaming to the table.

Try out your own variations, you'll be surprised at the tasty dishes you'll devise.

Remember, allow two eggs, a generous dash of milk or cream, and seasonings per person...and never try to make too large an omelet at a time, no matter how large your skillet. Beat the yolks slightly, add the cream and seasonings, next add the slightly beaten whites, and mix well.

Be sure to have that skillet hot, with a layer of melted butter filming the bottom. As you tilt the pan to ensure that the butter comes up the sides, put in the omelet, and just as soon as it starts to set, turn the heat low.

Keep lifting up the cooked part with a fork or knife so that the raw egg runs underneath, and just before it's ready, place it in a medium oven for just a very few minutes. And, if you're rolling the omelet around a filling, hold the pan in your left hand, almost upright over the serving platter, give it a bit of a push with a spatula—and there you are!

And if you're in more of a hurry, just beat the eggs together instead of separating yolks and whites. And, for you live-slowers or twosomes, layer sliced potatoes in your skillet, let them cook and brown, then pour the eggs over, along with whatever bits of ham or vegetables or seasonings such as filling, dust the wash!

And, for your sweet tooth, make a fruit or jelly omelet. Just omit the pepper and salt, make the omelet, use a small cupful of jelly or jam or crushed sweetened strawberries or such as filling, dust the wash!

New law requires dealer's license

The Mississippi Legislature has enacted the Mississippi Bird Dealers Licensing Act.

The Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce has been charged with the authority of granting these license.

This act is an effort to help control Exotic Newcastle Disease, a highly contagious disease that is very destructive to fowl.

This virus effects the respiratory and nervous systems of the birds. This law was enacted to protect the poultry industry in the state in the event of another outbreak of Exotic Newcastle Disease.

The records would be readily available in identifying movement of exotic or pet birds and in preventing further spreading of the disease.

All bird dealers are required to have a license for the sale of exotic or pet birds. The annual cost is $25 for a wholesale license and $10 for a retail license. These license must be obtained from the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

The dealer is required to keep records of each exotic or pet bird that are sufficient to identify the bird.

The dealer must also keep the name and address of the person from whom he acquired the bird and of the person to whom he transferred the bird.

A record of each bird the dealer knows to be or have been sick or to have died must be kept.

The Department of Agriculture and Commerce may require periodic reports of any or all of the records named in the law. These records shall be kept for a period of at least one year.

The department at the direction of the state veterinarian may quarantine, seize and destroy any birds which present a hazard of carrying exotic or untreatable diseases.

Fertilize Trees

Now, while yard and street trees are undergoing spring growth, is the time to provide the fertilizer they need for health and long life.

In the forest, nature provides a way of replenishing the nutrients trees need for growth. The accumulation of leaves, branches and even whole trees on the forest floor provides raw materials that bacteria and fungi digest and release as important elements of the soil.

These elements, primarily nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium, are absorbed by the roots of trees and used in the growth and other physiological functions of trees. Thus a nutrient cycle is present in most forests left in their natural state.

Unfortunately, we don't often have this nutrient cycle present in our urban forests. People remove fallen leaves and other organic material from their lawns, which are then mowed and even de-thatched to remove organic matter that would otherwise eventually nurture the trees.

Believe it or not, an attractive landscape can be designed that doesn't require removal of natural organic accumulation. Areas of ground cover, shrubs, flower beds or mulched areas in the root zone of trees will allow natural decomposition of organic materials and will certainly promote better tree health than lawn areas.

These beautiful lawns distract us from the fact that our urban soils are becoming increasingly depleted of those elements vital to tree health.

Add to this the fact that grass sod is an aggressive competitor for what little nutrients are available, and you can conclude that it is a real wonder that we have any trees at all in our cities.

Nutrient depletion is undoubtedly a factor in the shortened life span and ill health of many city trees.

The soil's lower organic content also increases soil compaction, thus adding to tree stress by reducing air exchange and water movement through the soil, two very important aspects of tree health.

Believe it or not, an attractive landscape can be designed that doesn't require removal of natural organic accumulation. Areas of ground cover, shrubs, flower beds or mulched areas in the root zone of trees will allow natural decomposition of organic materials and will certainly promote better tree health than lawn areas.

Where lawns cover the roots of trees, supplemental fertilization is necessary for good tree health and growth. Fertilizing the grass will help the trees a little, but adequate fertilization requires placing the fertilizer in the soil beneath the grass sod.

Googe running for State Attorney General post

Roger Googe announces his candidacy for the office of Attorney General of the State of Mississippi.

Googe is presently the assistant attorney general.

Googe states, "As head of the Federal Litigation Division of the Attorney General's office for the past six years, I have dealt with the complicated legal problems that face this state on a daily basis. I know the problems, I have been there."

He continued, "As your Attorney General, I will work to create a legal climate that will help in securing the jobs that are so desperately needed in Mississippi. This would involve working closely with the governor, legislature, and other state agencies to create a favorable business climate that would attract industry."

"During the past session of the legislature, a new law was passed governing utility rates. In order to assure that the rights of the consumers are protected, this new law must be monitored closely. Progress has been made in this area of consumer protection and we must not lose what has been gained. We must continue to move forward," the candidate continued.

"The office of attorney general is one that requires dedication, experience, and genuine concern for the people. I have dedicated the past 12 years of my career to helping solve the legal problems that have confronted us. I have the experience and I am ready."

Googe concluded saying, "My family and I ask for your prayer and support in my race for attorney general."

Molpus announces candidacy for secretary of state job

Dick Molpus, 33, a businessman who served as director of federal-state programs under Governor William Winter, has announced his candidacy for secretary of state.

Molpus, who was one of the architects of Winter's education reform effort, said that improving Mississippi's system of education would be a cornerstone of his work as secretary of state.

Molpus and his wife Sally have two children Helen, 4, and Richard Gregory, age 5 months.

Molpus, who is a graduate of the University of Mississippi, says, "With the severe reductions in state resources it is now doubly important to have a person of proven ability to run the secretary of state's office. We must have a leader who can deliver the maximum amount of service to our people at the least cost."

Molpus, Winter's first appointee, took over the federal-state programs office four years ago. Millions in federal funds had been frozen or were in jeopardy and a cloud of suspicion hung over the agency.

Molpus said he tackled this assignment by consolidating programs and streamlining operations.

"I consolidated 16 separate agencies into six vastly more effective agencies recruiting professionals to staff these departments," the candidate continued.

"The turnaround saved the people of Mississippi approximately $1 million annually in administrative costs and duplication," Molpus said.

"Money that had been spent for administrative salaries," said Molpus, "now provides increased assistance to cities and counties, additional job training for the unemployed, and more meals and other services to the elderly."

"In a time when state revenues are drastically reduced," said Molpus, "my work as federal-state director demonstrated the kind of cost-effective government that I will deliver as secretary of state."

"My know-how and proven practical experience will enable me to work for improved education while ensuring that the people of Mississippi get their full money's worth out of state government."

Bramlett re-enters race for the governor's post

Leon Bramlett has announced that he is re-entering the governor's race.

Bramlett withdrew from the race for the Republican nomination in early January because of a personal tragedy, the illness of his oldest daughter, said a spokesman for Bramlett.

"The office of governor is an awesome responsibility and a high public trust that should not be taken lightly or unadvisedly, nor do I undertake it otherwise."

Bramlett continued, "I love this country and this state and the people in it. We have all the talent in Mississippi that is necessary to move mountains. What we must do is harness it and use it effectively."

"People from this state have excelled in every field of human endeavor. In science, medicine, literature, industry, entertainment, on the playing field of this nation and the battlefields of the world, the people of Mississippi have distinguished themselves and I just believe they deserve the very best leadership," Bramlett said.

"I appeal to all Mississippians to join with us in this campaign for a better life and a better state. I believe the people of Mississippi, especially our young people, yearn for leaders above partisanship and personal gain. I believe they want us to put aside petty politics and politics without principle. This quest is better than that; it's bigger than any one of us, this is for the better of Mississippi," said Bramlett.

"It is an obvious fact that you can't win standing on the sidelines. That to me, is the problem with our state, with our country and with our society today, too many talented capable people standing on the sidelines."

Bramlett concluded by saying, "I invite them to come and join us and let us together build a better Mississippi."

McNeil to run for attorney general

Circuit Judge Niles McNeil of Louisville has announced his candidacy for the office of attorney general.

McNeil is a graduate of Mississippi State University and received a juris doctor degree from the University of Mississippi. He and his wife, the former Melanie Ann Clark of Jackson have two sons.

McNeil has served as law clerk with the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and is a practicing attorney in Louisville. He was elected district attorney in the Fifth Circuit Court District from 1976-78 and elected Circuit Judge of Fifth Circuit Court District in 1979 to present.

He is on the board of directors of the Louisville-Winston County Chamber of Commerce, Louisville Rotary Club, American Legion, and a former director of American Legion Boys State.

McNeil states, "When the voters of this state elect an attorney general they are hiring the chief lawyer for the State of Mississippi. I offer my experience as a practicing attorney, District Attorney and Circuit Judge as a resume to the citizens of Mississippi as I apply for the job."

"The office has three basic functions. First, to represent the state and its agencies in litigation in which they are parties. This particular function has caused the workload of the office to substantially increase in the last several years," the candidate continued.

"Second, to provide opinions to governmental agencies and offices on what the law is and how best to proceed without running afoul of it. In this area I propose to organize and catalogue the opinions so as to avoid duplication and contradiction."

"The third function is the representation of the people of this state and their interests in matters before the commissions and the courts. This includes the representation of the public in utility matters before the Public Service Commission and the courts, consumers in fraud cases, and the public generally in the fight against crime," he stated.

McNeil continued, "My past experience puts me in a position to be a strong and effective advocate for the people in these proceedings."

"But in addition, the attorney general, like any other elected official, has an obligation to provide progressive leadership. I shall work closely with the governor, members of the legislature, and all other governing officials and agencies to find solutions to the problems that face this state."

Criminal Justice facility size revealed

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The Hancock County Criminal Justice Committee met Tuesday night and was presented a space requirements architectural program by architects Fred Wagner and Fritz Suchke.

Wagner, a Bay St. Louis architect, and Nathaniel Curtis, architect of New Orleans with whom Suchke is associated, presented the recommended space needs for a criminal justice facility based on preliminary studies by the architects and prior recommendations of the committee.

Some 17,194 square-feet of enclosed building would be needed for the 50-bed facility and related activities, according to Wagner.

The estimated cost would run $110-$130 per square-foot according to Suchke who said, "That is the national average for this type of facilities under today's current construction costs."

Wagner stated, "We feel it is logical that the sheriff's office should be in the same building. This will also include the dispatchers area."

"We know there are currently difficulties which have to be worked out, but enough space will be allocated for the possibility of adding the dispatchers for the Bay St. Louis and Waveland police and fire departments," Wagner added.

The architect continued, "Whether these difficulties can be worked out before the facility is constructed, we do not know."

The dispatchers area is to be designed as to give a view of most of the facility.

Wagner reported the next step will be the submitting a rough floor plan or plans to the committee.

He stated, "We will now look at our two sites, the current jail and the property across the street and work in the spaces we have designated."

"It is possible we will present two plans or possibly one after we review the requirements," Wagner allowed.

The committee which is composed of some 35 residents of Hancock County selected by the Board of Supervisors and municipalities is scheduled to next meet with the architects on June 27.

Cajuns and Creoles have always considered the crawfish to be a gourmet's delight. Ask any native South Louisianian "the" food to eat and the answer will usually be crawfish.

Crawfish was introduced to early explorers many years ago and South Louisiana is thought of as the home of crawfish. Over the years consumers have discovered the delights of crawfish, resulting in a demand for this shellfish in many areas of the country.

Modern refrigeration and fast transportation has made it possible to ship crawfish alive and frozen to far away places to satisfy the appetite of the gourmet.

Demand has developed into a scientifically controlled and booming business for the cultivation and production of crawfish in man-made impoundments with controlled water depth and temperatures.

The largest amount of crawfish is not only produced in Cajunland but most of it is consumed there, attesting to its desirability as a food.

Crawfish has now become a relatively new enterprise in Mississippi.

The crawfish looks something like a lobster but is smaller and has a thinner and more slender shaped claw. As for flavor, there is a similarity with the crawfish meat having a sweeter flavor and more tender than lobster.

Like shrimp, crabs and lobsters, crawfish belong to the scientific class Crustacea. These animals have a hard shell called an exoskeleton, which provides some protection and gives rigidity to their bodies.

Crawfish, like lobsters, must be alive when ready to boil. Carefully pour live crawfish into boiling water. The crawfish are killed quickly upon contact with the hot water.

Allow ample room in pot for water and crawfish so all crawfish are submerged in the water. Boil five minutes or less in unseasoned water for use in dishes like etoufee or bisque. Don't overcook, they'll be hard to peel and not as tasty. Bright red color indicates doneness.

Boled crawfish to eat need well-seasoned water for boiling. You may use onions, lemon wedges, red pepper, garlic, commercial crab boil or salt and other seasonings you desire. You may also add potatoes, corn-on-the-cob and whole onions, and cook in the spicy water to serve with the crawfish.

After vegetables are cooked tender add crawfish and cook ten minutes. Remove from heat and set 15 minutes before removing from water. This allows the crawfish to absorb the flavor of the spices. Allow four pounds crawfish per person.

Since the availability and price of crawfish varies, many commercial operators and home consumers freeze crawfish meat when crawfish are plentiful and low in cost for use when crawfish are scarce and expensive. The proper method of freezing is as follows:

After peeling, wash all traces of the fat from the tails with clean cold water. If the fat is not removed, it may become rancid quickly in frozen storage, imparting an unpleasant taste to the meat.

Just before packaging the tails for freezing dip them in a weak lemon juice solution.

Use $\frac{1}{4}$ cup of regular strength lemon juice to $\frac{1}{2}$ cups of water to make the solution.

Too strong a solution will impart a lemon flavor to the meat. Concentrated lemon juice is also satisfactory, but reduce to regular strength before making solution.

Lemon juice will prevent the crawfish tails from turning "blue." This is a darkening of the meat resulting from freezing. Although harmless, this discoloration is unappetizing in appearance.

Crawfish meat may be frozen for long-term storage with excellent results. However, the meat may, under some conditions, undergo certain undesirable changes in texture and flavor. To minimize these changes, crawfish meat should be frozen as rapidly as possible, using small containers designed for freezing foods.

Pre-chilling the meat in your refrigerator prior to freezing will assist in a rapid freeze. In addition, water poured into the container with the crawfish meat can be chilled with ice. Freeze and store the meat at 0 degrees F (-18 degrees C) or lower.

In crawfish producing areas, live crawfish and fresh tail meat are usually available from December until June. March, April and May are the months when crawfish are most plentiful and of best quality. Although fresh crawfish and crawfish meat are seasonal, frozen crawfish tail meat is usually available throughout the year.

To Prepare Crawfish

Wash and inspect crawfish. Discard debris like bait and dead crawfish and remove mud and dirt by washing in large container. Many people add salt to the wash water to "purge" the crawfish. This practice is unnecessary and, in fact, just puts the crawfish under stress. A thorough washing is sufficient.

MOSLEM RITUAL—Demonstrating the function of a Ha Ft Ta Baby, an Iranian ewer and drain basin, is Beth Elkins of Long Beach. She explains the Ha Ft Ta Baby is utilized to contain rose water and placed at every Iranian home entrance as part of a symbolic cleansing rite before entering a house in that country. Hung near an entrance of the Elkins home in Bay St. Louis are camel bells which are heard as merchants enter Iranian cities with camel dung to sell for garden fertilizer, Elkins reports. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Iranian items in display at City-County Library

The patio of Joe Pilet on Highland Drive in Bay St. Louis was transformed into a typical Iranian dwelling on Monday by Beth Elkins of Long Beach who with her husband, Cdr. John Elkins USN, made her home in Iran for three years.

When the Elkins left Iran in 1959 they brought with them a sizable collection of Persian rugs, cushions, household articles of copper and brass, bracelets, bangles, books, trinkets and fabrics bought in the market places of that ancient land.

To set the stage properly Elkins placed at the entrance door a tall and graceful copper ewer and drain basin. A similar ewer, she explained, was to be found at the door of all Iranian homes.

The pitcher is filled with fragrant rose water and custom demands that hands, head and feet be touched (washed) as an act of purification for all who enter the house.

On the red brick floor an exquisite Guan prayer rug was spread. "Guam," she explained, "is the name of the Holy City where this rug was made." From Mashed, another Holy City, prayer beads were purchased.

From Mecca came the mold of clay on which the forehead of the worshipper rests. "Prayers," Elkins said, "are repeated five times daily when the devout face East, kneel humbly, spread palms where the rug pattern indicates location and give praise to Allah."

Most of the people belong to the Shian sect of the Islamic religion. There are also Sunnite Moslems, Christians, Jews and Zoroastrians living in Iran.

"The Spring Season in the cities is ushered in by camels whose drivers arrive with their ill-tempered and ill-smelling beasts bringing in side baskets great quantities of camel dung to be spread by the city gardeners," Elkins.

The lead camel is outfitted with a string of heavy clanging bells that clatter as the camel moves along on an awkward gait," Elkins added. These bells weigh from four to six pounds.

"The people of Iran are romantic in their love for flowers, flowing water and poetry," Elkins said and added "this patio with its bright flowers, flowing fountain and wrought iron furnishing could well be any Iranian setting."

On the table Elkins placed a tea setting of an antique Persian copper tea kettle, small clear glass mugs and two exquisitely wrought "water pipes" (which resemble glass vases).

One pipe of cobalt blue is embossed with pure gold, another of bottle green coloration has a portrait design.

Fittings for these water pipes were used by the natives with drug habits.

Prayer beads, it was explained, are worn by men and are considered somewhat as a status symbol. The motif used on many articles are similar to a paisley design and are thought by Persians a design inspired by falling leaves of the fir tree.

Although Iranian soil is rich, since water is very scarce there is no irrigation and only about 15 percent of the land is used for crops. There is no running water in the homes.

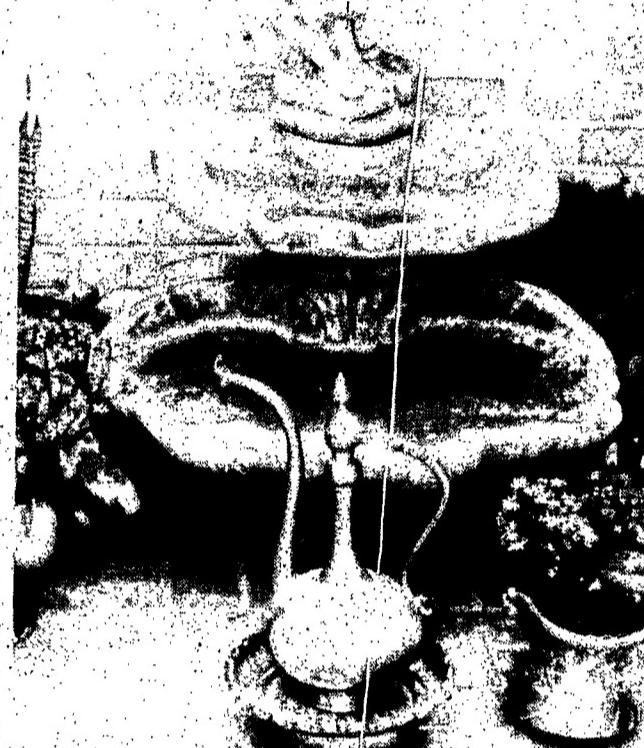

Ditches are cut through the villages and are filled with water which flows from mountain streams.

It is the belief of the people that water purifies itself when it has traveled ten feet and the ditch water is used by the public for all purposes—bathing, washing clothing, etc.

By invitation of the City-County Library coordinator, the articles from Iran are now on display in the Bay St. Louis library where they will remain until mid-June.

Elkins has also accepted an invitation to appear on a Friends of the Library program slated for early fall.

She will, at that time, display a large exhibit of her Iranian collection and tell some of her experiences and observations in visiting many sections of that country.

TIN PLATED COPPER—A hand-made Iranian copper ewer and drain basin named a Ha Ft Ta Baby and a bucket, all plated with tin sit near a small fountain on the patio of the Pilet home in Bay St. Louis. The items are included in a display now at City County Library in Bay St. Louis of several Iranian souvenirs collected by Beth Elkins of Long Beach. She notes Iranians plate copper items with tin because they dislike the copper finish which is generally admired by Americans. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Tai Chi classes offered in park

Tai Chi classes are being scheduled in June on Sunday afternoons from 2:30 p.m. at the Gulf Islands National Seashore in Ocean Springs.

The group meets near the Park Headquarters near the exhibit building and new pier.

Tai Chi (pronounced Ty-Chee) originated in China many thousand years ago and is in essence an exercise for mind and body which seeks to direct each person's individual energy through slow, graceful, controlled movements.

Tai Chi movements loosen the joints, awaken mental powers and strengthen heart and breath, and are a basis for self defense.

The exercises are used to stimulate the muscles and internal organs by accelerating the circulation of blood and expelling stagnant air; the muscles and vital organs thereby nourished by good breathing.

"You will be aware of changes in your body within 30 days with an exercise you can remain with for a lifetime," said Donna Stennum of Ocean Springs, program coordinator.

Loose clothing and flat soft-soled shoes are appropriate.

A $5 fee per week is suggested but any love offering will be appreciated.

"Take either entrance into the park and follow signs to Park Headquarters, then look for us at a picnic table in that area," Stennum added.

For information call Donna at 632-4225 or Sue at 875-5186.

Church League standings reported

In the Bay-Waveland Church Softball League last week the Methodists split their two games, defeating OLG No. 2 easily, and then losing to the Episcopalians.

OLG No. 2 also salvaged a split by downing the Baptists, as did OLG No. 1 earlier in the week.

The standings after two weeks find OLG No. 1 in first place with a 3-0 record, followed by the Episcopalians, 2-1, the Methodists, 2-2, OLG No. 2, 1-2, and the Baptists, 0-3.

Tonight, as the second round of play begins, the Episcopalians play OLG No. 2 in the early game and OLG No. 1 plays the Methodists in the nightcap.

Next Tuesday the Methodists take on the Baptists followed by the Episcopalians against OLG No. 1.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1983-1C

DEAR RANGER RICK,

Q. Do some swans give their babies piggyback rides?
A. Yes. Soon after black-necked and mute swan babies hatch, they crawl onto either parent's back. The parent swims around looking for food while the babies snuggle safely in the parent's soft, warm feathers.

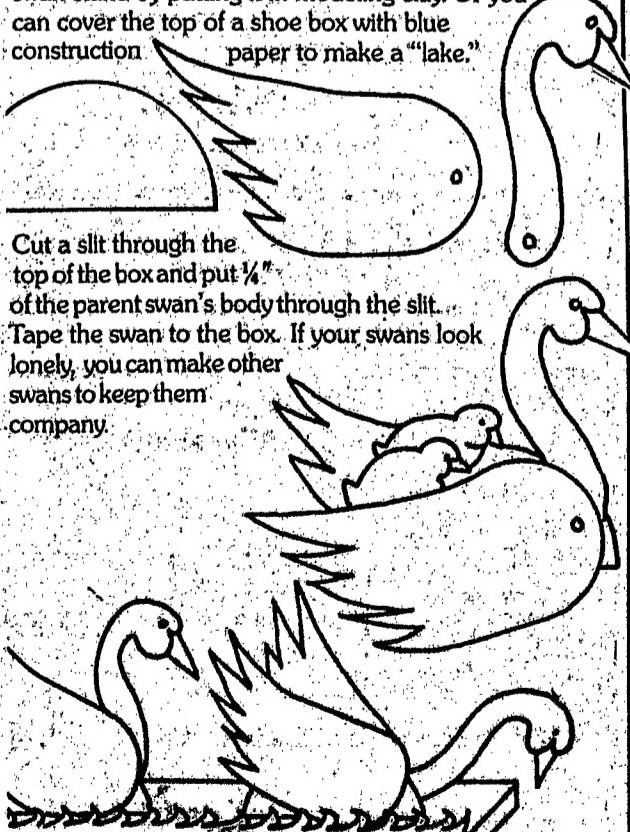

Q. Do fish sleep with their eyes open?
A. Fish don't have eyelids as you do, so they always look as if they are awake. But when fish are sleeping or resting, they are not really aware of what is happening around them.

Q. Is a bald eagle bald?
A. No, it's not bald at all, and it doesn't even look bald. The head of an adult bald-eagle is covered with white feathers. The word bald comes from the Old English word balde, which means white.

Swan Lake

Created by Elizabeth Athey and Kim Kerin

Using the half-circle drawing as a guide, cut out the parent swan's body. You can use cardboard, a paper plate, or construction paper. From the same material, cut out two wings and a long neck with a head. Attach the wings and neck to the swan's body with a brass fastener. Or you can use a thumb tack and tape. Now draw the baby swans (see picture). Glue or tape them to their parent's back as shown. The big swan's neck should move so that it can feed in the water. And the wings should move so that the parent can hide its young if danger is near. You can make the parent swan stand by putting it in modeling clay. Or you can cover the top of a shoe box with blue construction paper to make a "lake."

Cut a slit through the top of the box and put 1/4" of the parent swan's body through the slit... Tape the swan to the box. If your swans look lonely, you can make other swans to keep them company.

PROTECT YOUR HEART

Dr. Wm. L. POWELL can contribute to disease over a period of time! Of the seven malfunctions of the heart, only one is the cause of treatment for the first four: 1. Fibillation 2. Extra systoles 3. Palus Alternans 4. Arrhythmia. Why...you ask? Well, the heart is not independent of the nervous system. Every part of the body, including the heart. Your doctor of Chiropractic works with the nervous system and malfunctions of the heart are related to the nervous system. This is the reason why your doctor includes frequent checks on your heart, supplying us with concrete evidence of improvement with the circulatory disturbances of former and present patients.

A FEW GOOD LEADERS

For the past decade, emerging young business and professional leaders from across Mississippi have been involved in leadership skill training, and they have been encouraged to assume positions of responsibility in state and local public affairs.

The effort is paying dividends. Bright young leadership is surfacing throughout the state — in city halls, in courthouses, in the board rooms of development foundations, chambers of commerce, and other civic organizations, and even in the capitol and the state office buildings.

Many of these newcomers to the state political and civic scene are products of the Mississippi Economic Council-sponsored Leadership Mississippi Program, a program which could serve as a model for the rest of the states.

Persons not more than 35 years old, interested in the state and the local community, and interested in preparing for a position of leadership, might be interested in Leadership Mississippi.

A by-product of Leadership Mississippi may be the breakdown of any narrow regional approach to problems within the state.

For example, Leadership Mississippi encourages young leaders from the Gulf Coast to sit down with leaders from the Delta; it encourages communication between Central and South.

Sugar, food additives appear culprits in institutional diets

To house one prisoner in the Mississippi State Penitentiary at Parchman costs $20,000 per year, but there may be a way to cut this cost, according to a University of Southern Mississippi Criminal justice professor.

Dr. Thomas R. Panko and Dr. Stephen J. Schoenthaler of California State University recently presented their ideas in a paper entitled "Cutting the Budget and Internal Problems: A Dietary Strategy."

Speaking at the 28th annual Southern Conference on Corrections in Tallahassee, Panko and Schoenthaler said that prison overcrowding and budgetary constraints have produced a "fiscal crisis and a behavioral crisis simultaneously."

"There is growing body of research which suggests that anti-social behavior in correctional institutions is partially attributed to something in the diet," said Panko.

Food additives and sugar appear to be the something in the diets. In the decade since Dr. Benjamin Feingold, an eminent allergist and pediatrician suggested that behavioral problems in his patients could be eliminated by avoiding synthetic colorings and flavorings, much research has been done on the subject.

Schoenthaler researched the behavioral effect of sugar on children and adult inmates' behavior and found that a reduction in anti-social behavior occurred with revised diets.

"Traditionally people in correctional institutions have said, 'let's let them eat whatever they want within reason to keep them happy,'" said Panko, "but we have found there are certain foods which aggravate the situation. By changing around the usual diet in some very simple ways we can effect great savings. We're not saying cut out everything, just offer a wider variety of alternatives and cut back on food additives and sugar."

One example was fruit juices as an alternative to soft drinks.

This dietary strategy of behavior is also a way for correctional administrators to save money, sometimes as much as 39 cents on every food dollar. This could amount to a significant reduction in the $20,000 per year per prisoner at Parchman or the $12-15,000 per youth in Oakley and Columbia Training Schools.

State institutions have expressed some interest, according to Panko. "We are hoping something can be done because it would help out those facilities in terms of behavior problems, improve nutrition and cut the cost."

He said the dietary strategy which has already been tried on juveniles in Virginia and on adults in Florida and California with good results may become more appealing considering current figures on prison overcrowding.

"Today our total inmate population in the U.S. numbers about 400,000 and we are adding about 40,000 per year... Some correctional facilities cost as much as $70,000 per cell to build. Dr. Schoenthaler and I think we have an innovative way of handling some of the budgetary and behavioral problems," said Panko.

Swimming, tennis courses planned

TENNIS

A series of tennis clinics for children and adults will be held at the University of New Orleans beginning June 6. The clinics are designed to provide specialized, beginner to advanced instruction within small groups.

The children's tennis clinics, for ages eight through 15, will be held in three sessions, five days each, from 1 to 4 p.m. The sessions are June 6-10; June 12-16 and June 20-24.

The adult sessions, for ages 16 and older, will be held on the same dates from 6 to 9 p.m.

In addition to the clinics, private, semi-private and group tennis lessons are offered once a week in one-and-a-half hour sessions, Monday through Friday. Equipment is supplied.

Koch takes Rice BA degree

Included among 889 graduates at Rice University's 70th Commencement earlier this month was Laurie R. Koch, daughter of Mrs. Mary Lou Koch, 956 South Beach Boulevard, Bay St. Louis, and Raymond C. Koch, 60 Helmsman Court in Baltimore, Md.

Ms. Koch is granddaughter of Alfred and Catherine Schwartz of Hutchinson, Kan. She majored in art and religious studies, earning a BA degree.

Bill Broyles, editor-in-chief of Newsweek Magazine and a Rice graduate in the class of 1966, delivered the commencement address. Among the 889 awarded were 222 Master's and 71 Ph.D.'s.

Rice University, which opened its doors in the fall of 1912, is Houston's oldest institution of higher education.

An independent university with 2,600 undergraduates and 1,000 graduate students, it is currently ranked ninth in the nation in size of private endowment ($345,336,000 on June 30, 1982) and third in number of National Merit Scholars (544 in 1982-83).
